

ABBS and University of Cape Coast Acknowledge Academic Collaboration

Acharya Bangalore B School \(ABBS\) Bengaluru, India has taken another step towards strengthening its international academic network through a proposed collaboration with the University of Cape Coast (UCC), Ghana. The collaboration reflects the shared interest of both institutions in promoting international academic cooperation, research, institutional development and cross-cultural learning.

Following discussions between representatives of ABBS and UCC, the collaboration has been formally acknowledged. Both the institutes have acknowledged the proposed areas of collaboration and expressed its commitment to engaging the necessary stakeholders to support the successful implementation of the partnership.

The proposed collaboration covers a wide range of academic initiatives, including student progression pathways, hybrid delivery of academic programmes, semester-based study abroad opportunities, joint research and publications, and faculty exchange programmes.

The partnership also provides scope for joint international conferences, seminars, workshops and faculty development programmes, along with short-term international immersion programmes combining academic learning, industry exposure, entrepreneurship, innovation and cultural exchange. Opportunities for industry visits, internships, live projects and corporate engagement will further strengthen industry-academia interaction.

Another important aspect of the proposed partnership is the sharing of educational best practices, creating opportunities for continued knowledge exchange between the two institutions.

The acknowledgement marks a positive step towards translating the discussions into meaningful collaborative initiatives. Through this engagement, both the institutes look forward to developing a long-term academic relationship, creating greater opportunities for global exposure, collaborative research, student mobility and cross-cultural learning.
